My Long-Playing Records: and Other Stories Richard Jespers

In this eclectic collection of fifteen short stories assembled over the course of a decade, an array of idiosyncratic and unconventional characters tackles diverse subjects such as surviving abuse (“A Certain Kind of Mischief”), navigating hormonal drives (“Men at Sea”), and redefining your life before finally leaving this world (“Bathed in Pink”).

Possessing a wry—and even irreverent—tone, this broad collection often uses a twisted sense of humor to explore the twisted world in which we live. Delving into such themes as fatherhood (“Engineer”), ancestral baggage (“Handy to Some”), and the solace of music (“My Long-Playing Records”), the stories share a common thread of hope, as characters look forward to better lives in the future than what they have in the present.

In the spirit of Adam Haslett's You Are Not a Stranger Here and Peter Cameron's The Half You Don't Know, the characters of My Long-Playing Records and Other Stories leap off the page with an unabashed—and unapologetic—sense of self and self-worth as they live out their lives as authentically as possible.
